analysis and risk response. a) The risk identification is achieved by completing checklists, organizing meetings for identifying risks and analysis of archived documents. b) The risk analysis uses methods such as: determining the expected value, Monte Carlo simulation and decision trees.

Modern Methods of Risk Identification in Risk Management century, the methods of risk analysis recommended by the pedagogical literature are the stochastic Critical Path Method (CPM) for schedule risk, and a stochastic simulation of costs from the Work Breakdown Structure (WBS). Both techniques require a specification of uncertainty by credit risk analysis. Credit risk modeling has been the subject of considerable research interest in nance and has recently drawn the attention of statistical re-searchers. In the rst chapter, we provide an up-to-date review of credit risk models and demonstrate their close connection to survival analysis.
